

J. P. MORGAN TO HAVE WORLD'S FINEST BANK

Four Story Structure to Replace
Present Old Fashioned Building.

COST WILL BE $2,000,000

Land on Which It Will Stand
Worth $4,000,000—For Morgan & Co. Alone.

J. P. Morgan & Co. will have without doubt the finest private banking house in the world when the designs of Trowbridge & Livingston are executed for the new building which will replace the present structure at the southeast corner of Wall and Broad streets. Not only will the new building be a magnificent banking house but it will be well as a most complete office building for the firm's exclusive use. Besides all of the best features of the most modern office structures this will have private sleeping rooms and baths for use of the members of the firm on occasion and a terrace on a level with the top floor where on pleasant days meals may be served in the open or where the firm members may take a little recreation away from busy Wall street.

In construction the building will be one of the wonders of the city. It will be four stories high and the three upper floors will be hung from great trusses just below the roof instead of resting on steel girders as in the ordinary building.

Many of the features of the structure can be described only by the use of superlatives. In the first place it will cost $2,000,000 and maybe $2,000,000. The banking floor will be the largest in any private banking house in the world, covering an area of 15,000 square feet. In this great area there will not be a pillar nor a post, these being unnecessary by reason of the floors above being suspended. The exterior of the structure will be of marble and the interior will be of marble and some of the blocks to be used will be the largest ever employed in building construction in this city. The foundations will be seven feet thick and capable of supporting a building as high as the Bankers Trust Building, while the vault will be the largest in any private banking house, equalling in size those in the Bankers Trust and the Guaranty Trust buildings. It is said that the plot on which the structure will be erected is worth in the neighborhood of $4,000,000. This added to the cost of the building makes the banking house the most valuable property in the world occupied by a single business concern.

Despite all of this the keynote of the building is simplicity. Outside of the materials to be used, which in themselves are beyond the reach of the average builder, there is almost no ornamentation. Some simple carving about the cornice and a couple of ornamental pillars on either side of the entrance door complete the exterior decorations, while simple mosaics in panels form the principal interior embellishments.

When the building is completed people on the street will see what seems to be a two story structure of white Tennessee marble with an entrance at the corner of Wall and Broad streets, just where the one is in the present building. The exterior is severely plain, the whole topped by a cornice perhaps ten feet high. The building will rise about ten feet above the sidewalk, or a little above the roof of the Sub-Treasury across the street from it. It will be much lower than the Mills Building, which will bound it on two sides. From the outside the distinctive features will be the windows on the first or banking floor, which will be 22 feet high and 12 feet wide.

Instead of there being a single floor above the banking room as appears from the outside, by skillful planning of the architect, all of good height and well lighted and aired.

Sentiment, it is said, caused the placing of the entrance on the corner. The Tennessee marble for the exterior was the choice of Mr. Morgan himself. It is of this material that his library on Thirty-sixth street is built and the memorial to his father in Hartford. It is of the same material that the exterior of the building purposes because of its hardness and compactness. Though the structure will have a steel frame it will in reality be one of self-supporting marble walls. The blocks of marble will be three feet thick and will in no way be related to the steel.

In erecting their new structure the Morgan firm is going just to the other extreme from that usually followed as regards the building line. There never will be need for the Borough President to chop off any of its front, for the structure will be placed two feet back from the building line on both Broad and Wall streets, and in this the owners will give up the sidewalk property.

The already paid for Wall street property, would mean land valued at almost half a million dollars. The plot fronts 156.9 feet on Wall street and 113.5 feet on Broad, so that the company is giving up 540 square feet of the most valuable property in the world.

Above the banking room windows will be coping ornamented by simple pilasters and above the upper tier of windows will be a heavy cornice somewhat more elaborate but still quite simple. The entrance too takes its chief character from its simplicity. This entrance will be 27 feet high and 14 1/2 feet wide. It will set back quite a distance from the sidewalk and will be a large block of marble will stand on the sidewalk on either side of the entrance and will be surmounted by an Art Nouveau pillar, probably of bronze, on top of which will be a globe containing a light. Between the two blocks, each of which will be six feet square and four feet high, six easily graded steps will lead up to a vestibule eighteen feet wide with an ornamental marble

ODD THINGS IN WOMEN'S STORE.

Sterilized Gloves and Homemade Bread in Suffrage Dairy.

A new dairy and grocery store is to be opened to-morrow at 2540 Broadway, near Ninety-fifth street, financed and run by women. The clerks will wear sterilized rubber gloves and deliveries will be made by a woman with a push cart labeled "Votes for Women."

The store is the first to be opened by the newly incorporated Suffrage Pure Food Stores Company, of which Mrs. Sophia Loebinger is president, Mrs. Alice Burke secretary and Miss Alice Hutchinson treasurer. All are members of the International Suffrage Club, which has been selling eggs and butter in its club-rooms.

The new store will be supplied by women, for its butter, eggs, honey, fresh killed chickens and home cured ham will come from farms owned by women in New Jersey. No cold storage products will be admitted. These things will be sold at a little below the usual prices, since the middleman has been eliminated, and ordinary groceries in the best grades will be on sale at the usual prices.

The delicatessen department will include home made cake, cookies, bread and candy. If the first store proves a success similar stores will be opened elsewhere.

NURSE BLAMED FOR BOY'S DEATH BY FIRE

Matches Left in Lad's Room in Mount Vernon Hospital.

It Is Said.

MOUNT VERNON, Feb. 18.—Coroner W. H. Livingston of Westchester county said to-night that he was going to make a thorough investigation into the death of John McLaughlin, two and a half years old, who was burned to death in the Mount Vernon Hospital yesterday afternoon. He said that the circumstances were mysterious and that he intended to find out who was responsible.

The child was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John McLaughlin of 159 South Eleventh avenue, Mount Vernon. He had been taken to the hospital more than two weeks ago with pneumonia. Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin visited the child at the hospital on Sunday afternoon and then the little fellow was running about his room. At that time Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin noticed matches lying on a table in the room. Mrs. McLaughlin told Coroner Livingston that she thought nothing of the presence of the matches because she supposed that due care was taken for the safety of patients.

Investigation shows that the boy, John McLaughlin, had burned himself to death. The boy had been badly burned before a nurse arrived in the room.

According to Mrs. McLaughlin, Miss Land, superintendent of the hospital, said that the nurse in charge was not in constant attendance, and in this was negligent in her duty and would be severely punished.

Mr. McLaughlin says that he was told that a doctor had left a box of matches on top of his chart on a table in the room.

At Mount Vernon Hospital no official statement can be obtained.

SAYS DOUGHERTY AIDED CROOKS

Discharged Employee Makes Serious Charges in $20,000 Slander Suit.

JAMES V. ORTELO, dismissed as confidential stenographer by Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty, who had accused him of making police secrets public, yesterday filed a suit for $20,000 against Dougherty in which he gives reasons for his discharge. Ortelio bases his action on alleged slanderous statements by Dougherty that he had been guilty of a misdemeanor in giving out private secrets.

Ortelio said that while he was employed by the defendant he learned of violations of the law by Dougherty, and caused him to be discharged if he made known his information in the interests of justice.

The plaintiff says he learned that Dougherty illegally divulged confidential police information to representatives of the Pinkerton detective agency, added and abetted gamblers on parole to open gambling places in New York and Brooklyn and permitted gamblers on parole to violate the provisions of the parole by which they had to report to him. Ortelio also alleges that Dougherty was "negligent and recreant" in the performance of his duty to suppress gambling.

The plaintiff brought a $50,000 slander suit against Dougherty a year ago, but did not press the case and it was dismissed recently. The present suit is based on new allegations.

Mrs. Winston was prominent in Raleigh society. The Episcopal Church had few women so widely known. She was the leading spirit of the Woman's Club of Raleigh, composed of 400 women.

R. C. Strong, her brother-in-law, sent word to-night he was on the way to take the body home.

THREE TRAINS STUCK UNDER HARLEM RIVER

Worried Passengers Fight Past
Guards and Walk Through Subway.

ALL PENNED UP AN HOUR

Prefer Third Rail Danger to Sitting Still and Wondering
"What's the Matter?"

Men and women passengers of three stalled subway trains of the West Farms division sat for more than an hour last night underneath the Harlem River wondering all sorts of things. Finally the nervous strain became too great and they demanded to be let out.

They fought with guards, who would restrain them, got the doors open and wandered through the tube under the river until at last they came past third rails and through darkness to the safety of the Mott avenue station.

The first train stopped at 7:50 o'clock and it was 9:15 before the last passenger climbed to the platform, his way lighted by swinging lamps of the guards.

The block, which stopped all traffic on the Bronx division, was caused by a broken shoe. A ten-car northbound train pulled out of the 135th street station at 7:50 o'clock, and when it came to the cross switch at 140th street, where the tube crosses the river to the Mott avenue station, a shoe broke. There was a flareup, but the train was well into the tube when the broken shoe caught and ripped a section of the rail.

The lights did not go out as the train bumped to a standstill, and the passengers, tried to push the crumpled train forward and presently a third train waited south of the switch, while trains were bumping to a stop all down the line to 125th street and jammed passengers were wondering what was up.

A wrecking crew arrived and the police and the light from the lanterns did nothing to comfort the passengers. To cap it all a southbound train short circuited 100 feet away from the 140th street station. It was then 8:40 o'clock and men and women arose and announced to worried guards that they were not going to sit under the river any longer.

The crews told them that there was too much of a risk in walking along that black tube, but they fought their way to the doors, got them open and swung off into the gloom.

No one fainted and there wasn't a sign of panic. They had to go 200 feet from the head car to get to the little three step ladder that leads over the third rail up to the Mott avenue station platform. They all walked up gingerly while guards held down lanterns and yelled advice.

When all the passengers were out of the southernmost train it was backed down to 145th street and Lenox avenue and switched back through the southbound tube to take the switch back again.

The greatest congestion of the evening was at 149th street and Third avenue, where passengers transfer to the elevated road.

By 9:30 a shuttle train was running between 149th street and 135th street in the southbound track and the block was lifted, though wreckers were still working over the cause of it all.

VANDAL FOILED AT ART SHOW.

Tried to Steal Cubist Painting That Was Screwed to Wall.

Any fear that the weird paintings of the Post-Impressionists, Cubists and Futurists, now on view in the International art exhibition in the armory at Lexington avenue and Twenty-sixth street would not be appreciated in this country was dispelled yesterday when it became known that a thief had attempted to steal one of the exhibits.

While not anticipating any such contingency, the committee on hanging had taken the precaution to firmly screw some of the more precious works to the walls.

The thief had almost unhooked a still life, or, as the French call it, a nature morte, painted by Henri Julien Rousseau, which hung in Room P when he was interrupted.

Fifteen hundred visitors were in the armory at the time.

MADERO ARRESTED; HUERTA PROVISIONAL PRESIDENT WITH
DIAZ'S CONSENT; FIGHTING ENDS

Mexico's Provisional President

Gen. Victoriano Huerta was proclaimed as Madero's successor after conference with Gen. Diaz.

FURTHER TROUBLE IN MEXICO IS FEARED

Outcome of Revolution Regarded as Most Unsatisfactory by Washington Officials.

EXPECT BITTER OPPOSITION

Prediction Made That Country
Will Become Centre of Uninterrupted Fights.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—At 11 o'clock to-night the State Department received a despatch from Ambassador Wilson confirming the reports of the arrest of President Madero and his brother Gustavo by the soldiers under the command of Gen. Blanquet and Huerta.

The light in which the State Department regards the shifting of control in Mexico city was indicated to-night when it was declared that nothing could be said at this time as to whether the provisional Presidency of Gen. Huerta would be recognized by Ambassador Wilson.

Department officials said that the whole situation seemed to be so uncertain it was impossible to tell what course the Ambassador would feel obliged by circumstances to follow.

It is presumed, however, if the fighting ceases and Huerta establishes himself in full control of the city he will be recognized as the de facto head of the Government.

Consular reports to the State Department to-night indicated that most of Mexico is free from serious disorders, though train service has been suspended in many parts of the republic. Telegraphic service is also interrupted.

The selection of Gen. Victoriano Huerta to be provisional President of Mexico, through the treachery of Gen. Blanquet to President Madero, is regarded in Washington as a night and an unfortunate conclusion to the struggle that has been going on in Mexico city for the last ten days.

The prediction was made to-night in many quarters that the arrangement made in Mexico city to-day would prove to be only the beginning of further trouble in Mexico.

The outcome of the struggle is regarded here as a purely mercenary arrangement and not at all logical or natural. From the limited information at hand to-night it was believed that the entire settlement was brought about to a large extent by the use of money and not by the working out of natural forces.

That Mexico, or even Mexico city, will quietly accept the arrangement made between Gen. Blanquet or Gen. Diaz and Gen. Huerta is very much doubted.

CONFIRMED BY WILSON

Gen. Blanquet Arrests Ma-

Shot Dead When Resisting
Arrest of President.

The civil war in Mexico city ended last night. The Federal commanders imprisoned Madero, his family and his advisers, made Gen. Huerta provisional President and put Gen. Diaz in command of all of the troops.

Madero and his followers resisted arrest and two officers were shot dead in the President's private office.

The news from Mexico city and was confirmed by advices that President Taft received from Ambassador Wilson. The President and his advisers are apprehensive, believing Huerta's unpopularity will require intervention sooner or later. Washington was not pleased.

The American Ambassador informed the President that Madero had established a censorship on newspaper despatches for the sole purpose of deceiving the United States as to the actual weakness of his Government. It now develops that Ambassador Wilson had been accurately informed as to the strength of the rebellion and that his advice to the President concerning Diaz's strength were correct in detail. The coup d'etat which unseated Madero caused hilarious enthusiasm in Mexico city, the people crowding the streets and cheering the new heads of Government. Food is being distributed and a beginning has been made toward restoring policing and sanitation. The American and foreign residents received the news with gladness.

ARMY ABANDONS MADERO.

Revolution Ends as Gen. Blanquet
Arrests Madero.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 18.—Francisco I. Madero, his family and his Cabinet Ministers are prisoners in the National Palace. Gen. Victoriano Huerta is provisional President of the republic. Gen. Felix Diaz, a conqueror after ten days of civil war, is commander in chief of all of the forces.

The provisional President sent to-night the following telegram to the State Governors of Mexico:

"By decision of the Senate I have taken charge of the Government. Madero is a prisoner."

The Madero Government fell and the revolution ended when Gen. Blanquet arrested Madero. Diaz, desiring a military man and a strong personality at the head of the Government, consented to recognize the temporary government. He was not consulted until Madero had been arrested.

Gen. Blanquet immediately arrested Madero in his private office in the National Palace and imprisoned him under heavy guard with his uncle, Ernesto Madero, other members of his family and his advisers. Gen. Huerta arrested the former President's brother, Gustavo Madero, the Finance Minister, in a restaurant near the National Palace and imprisoned him and arrested also Gen. Delgado. The Chapultepec cadets accompanied Gen. Huerta.

The conspiracy was put in operation when Gen. Blanquet and Lieut.-Col. Jimenez Riverol, Major Izquierza and twenty other officers entered the salon of the National Palace, where the President was in conference with all of the Cabinet Ministers save Gurrza and Ernesto Madero. Several personal friends of Madero were in the salon and the room was guarded by soldiers of the President's own bodyguard.

Madero sprang to his feet and demanded the reason for the intrusion. Gen. Blanquet replied:

"You are our prisoner."

There were exclamations of surprise and alarm from the company with the President. Gen. Blanquet rapidly explained that he, Gen. Huerta and other commanders had decided to change the
